

TRUST CONNECTION

A Monthly Report on Trust News and Information

Inlet Private Wealth & Trust takes the time to learn your financial aspirations, evaluate your personal circumstances and then provide honest, independent advice. Working together we can build a strong foundation by providing solid trustee and investment management solutions that helps protect your wealth and provide peace of mind for the future of your estate.

Inlet Private Wealth was founded and structured to best serve its clients. We believe that effective wealth management is a deeply personal process, one that must be objective, engaged and based on each client's unique goals. Clients deserve tailored solutions, and we work collaboratively with our clients to achieve their unique financial objectives.

(561) 781-0400

Inletprivatewealth.com

Reynolds Plaza, Suite 206
1061 E. Indiantown Road
Jupiter, FL 33477

How to Effectively Position Life Insurance

As a result of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act passed in 2017, the estate tax exemption more than doubled from $5.49 million per individual in 2017 to $11.58 million in 2020. For many people, the primary reason to establish an irrevocable life insurance trust (ILIT) was to make sure the proceeds of their life insurance policies would not be subjected to estate tax. Upon the grantor's death, his or her loved ones would receive the insurance proceeds, undiminished by estate taxes. Alternatively, the proceeds could be used to take care of liquidity needs of their estates. With the dramatic increase in the estate tax exemption, many people may assume that they no longer need to maintain their ILIT, as their estate will not be subject to estate tax. In fact, in 2018, the first year of the increased exemption, only about 1,900 estate tax returns were filed for taxable estates, affecting less than 0.1% of the people who died that year.

Does this mean that ILITs are alive as an estate planning tool? Are ILITs still a useful arrow in the financial planner's quiver? The answer to both questions, for many people, is a definite yes. Even if you do not have a federal estate tax problem, an ILIT can be a valuable tool. Here are some of the reasons:

Asset Protection

Every state has different rules determining the extent to which an individual's assets, including those that are part of their estate following death, are protected from the claims of creditors. Assets in excess of these amounts may be attached for the payment of legitimate debts. With an ILIT, life insurance proceeds are payable to the trust for further distribution to the beneficiaries of the trust. As such, the proceeds can be protected from creditors' claims until they are distributed pursuant to the terms of the trust. This includes both creditors of the decedent and the beneficiaries. Many trusts also have spendthrift provisions that prevent creditors from attaching the interest of the beneficiary in the trust's assets until distributed to him or her. If the proceeds remain in the trust, they will be safe from creditors.

Preservation of Government Benefits

Having the proceeds of a life insurance policy paid into an ILIT can help protect the government-paid benefits of an ILIT beneficiary, such as social security disability income, Medicaid, or benefits payable to an individual with special needs. With appropriate drafting, the trustee can control when and how distributions to the beneficiary are used to prevent the loss of eligibility for such benefits. Where this is a goal of the ILIT, an independent advisor with specific knowledge of the complex rules and regulations regarding eligibility should be appointed to assist with the development of distribution schedules and strategies.

State Estate Tax Avoidance

While most states no longer have an estate tax, 12 states (and the District of Columbia) still impose a death tax. And for some of those that do, the estate tax threshold is much lower than the federal exemption. For example, Massachusetts and Oregon impose an estate tax with a maximum rate of 16%, and the exemption is only $1 million. And in several others, the continued ...

exemption is in the range of $4-6 million. For residents of those states that do impose an estate tax, an ILIT is still a useful strategy for avoiding those taxes.

The rules of establishing an ILIT that will be recognized as such by the courts and taxing authorities have not changed. The trust must be irrevocable, and all the incidents of ownership (generally, the ability to change a beneficiary or cancel or assign the policy) must belong to the trust. In addition, the trust beneficiaries must have the right to the use, benefit, and enjoyment of contributions to the trust by the grantor for any purpose, including payment of policy premiums, to qualify as a present interest gift, thus avoiding inclusion in the grantor's taxable estate upon their death.

ILITs can be complicated vehicles that require the skills of an experienced attorney to draft agreements correctly. However, in the right situation they continue to be a powerful tool that should be considered in many wealth management plans.

A LOCAL TRUST SOLUTION

Call us today to learn more about working with Inlet Private Wealth & Trust.
For information and assistance contact us at:

Inlet Private Wealth & Trust

(561) 781-0400 | InletPrivateWealth.com

Reynolds Plaza, Suite 206, 1061 E. Indiantown Road, Jupiter, FL 33477

Inlet Private Wealth & Trust is a Trust Representative Office of National Advisors Trust Company. This publication contains general information only, and National Advisors Trust Company is not, by this publication, rendering accounting, financial, investment, legal, tax or other professional advice or services.